Family History

Counts and Marquis, the Radini Tedeschi are a noble family of Burgundian origins who came to Switzerland and then to Italy during the Middle Ages, following the Burgundian invasions. Having settled in Piacenza thanks to their bloodline from King Berengar II of Ivrea, the Radini Tedeschi were related to the Baldini, the Visconti, the Gonzaga, the Caracciolo, the Casati, the Anguissola, the Gradenigo, the Landi, the Cigala Fulgosi, the Pucci, the Appiani of Aragon. In the various branches of the family, many eminent personalities distinguished themselves: in addition to Borgognone Tedeschi and Daniele I, decorated in 1477 by the Duke of Milan Galeazzo Maria Visconti, there were Giampaolo Radini Tedeschi, “distinguished Majordomo” of Margherita of Austria, daughter of the Emperor Charles V of Habsburg, and Giacomo Maria Radini Tedeschi, Bishop of Bergamo whose secretary and student was the young Angelo Roncalli, future Pope Saint John XXIII.

The Good Pope wrote the book entitled “Mons. Giacomo Radini Tedeschi vescovo di Bergamo” (1963).
